Internet Librarian International announces London 2010 dates

Internet Librarian International is delighted to announce that the 2010 conference and Sponsor Showcase will take place on 14 & 15 October 2010, with pre-conference workshops on 13 October. The venue will once again be Novotel London West in London, UK.

This is the 12th edition of this popular international forum for the internet library and information community. The 2009 event welcomed attendees from 33 countries and provided comprehensive coverage of tools and techniques today's librarians and information professionals are embracing to remain competitive.

"Internet Librarian International 2009 was another resounding success with almost 75% of delegates rating the event 'Excellent' or 'Good'." Comments Programme Co-Chair, Marydee Ojala,

"It follows that I am delighted that Internet Librarian International will return to London in October 2010. As a conference that focuses exclusively on the information professional community, it brings together practicing librarians from countries around the globe to share their experiences and expertise. Participants from public, academic, government, and corporate libraries learn about new technologies, resources, and methodologies at Internet Librarian International."

Show producers, Information Today, are expected to continue to offer substantial discounts for colleagues and group attendance. Updates and Show news will be available throughout the year at: www.internet-librarian.com
